SMITH BARRED BY SENATE; VOTE IS OVERWHELMING

Illinois Man Defeated by Vote
Of 61 to 23 From Being
Seated

39 DEMOCRATS AGAINST

Governor Must Now Name
Man To Fill The Vacancy

By William K. Hutchinson
I. N. S. Staff Correspondent

WASHINGTON, Jan. 20.—A new "unwritten law," barring from the Senate men elected through the expenditure of great campaign funds, was drying on the statute books today as a result of the Senate's action in excluding Frank L. Smith (R) of Illinois.

For the first time in its history, the Senate denied a seat to a Senator-elect holding legal credentials, on the ground that excessive campaign expenditures tainted his election with "fraud and corruption." In excluding Smith, the Senate formally endorsed the "rule" laid down in the old Newberry case six years ago, that heavy campaign expenditures invalidated an election.

The vote ousting Smith was so overwhelming it surprised even his opposition. It was 61 to 23, with twenty-one Republicans, one Farmer-Laborite and thirty-nine Democrats voting against him, while but two Democrats and twenty-one Republicans voted for him. Illinois was left with but one Senator as a result of the Senate's action. Authorities here were agreed that the next move is up to Governor Len Small of Illinois, who can appoint a temporary successor to Smith pending a special election to fill the vacancy or simply permit the vacancy to exist until another Congress convenes when Smith might try again to enter the Senate.

State News

HARRISBURG, Jan. 20 (I. N. S.).—Four men residing in this vicinity are in line for liberal shares of $450,000 plus interest—if the heirs of the Jacob DeHaven estate succeed in collecting that amount.

The claimants say that DeHaven supplied General George Washington with nearly a half million dollars in gold during the revolutionary war, and that the sum aided Washington during the bitter winter at Valley Forge.

The claim has been before Congress since shortly before the Civil War, and is now again being pressed.

The claimants include three residents of Duncannon and one who lives in Enola.

HONORED AGAIN AT STATE FARM EXHIBIT

William F. Kelly, Doylestown, Wins Awards For Poultry

IN BARRED ROCK CLASS

DOYLESTOWN, Jan. 20.—Additional honors have been won again this year at the twelfth annual State Farm Show at Harrisburg by William F. Kelly, Deputy Clerk of Quarter Sessions Court of Bucks County, and owner of the Journey's End Poultry Farm at Mechanics Valley, three miles east of here.

Competing among nine hundred birds in a poultry show that is twice as large as a year ago when the Kelly birds swept the important wins in their class and were picked by several leading poultry fanciers of the State as being fine enough to compete with the leaders in the Madison Square Garden show in New York, all of the seven entries from the Kelly poultry farm were placed this year by the judges. All of his entries received prizes.

According to telegraphic information received this morning from County Farm Agent William F. Greenwalt, of Doylestown, who is attending the show, Bucks county has again been honored by the outstanding victories of the Kelly birds in the Barred Rock class.

"Competition was very keen in the poultry show this year," County Farm Agent Greenwalt said today, in discussing the show. "Every class was well filled with the very finest of birds from every section of the State with the largest poultry fanciers in Pennsylvania in competition. The victory of the Kelly birds is outstanding in every respect."

Among the "firsts" carried away by the Kelly birds from the Journey's End Poultry Farm in the Barred Rock class was first cock in that breed, first hen in Barred Rock class, first and third hen in the Barred Rock class, fourth pullet and third and fifth cockerel in the Barred Rock class.

Annual Report of Free Library

To the Shareholders of the Bristol Free Library:

Your Board of Managers takes pleasure in presenting herewith the twelfth annual report of the operation of your Library as a free institution. This unostentatious celebration of the passing of the twelfth milestone in the existence of your Library is but a fitting tribute to the clarity of judgment of those who twelve years ago undertook the task of building for our community an institution that would prove of inestimable value to all classes and all creeds within the radius of its field of endeavor. Gradually its growth has increased, not sporadically; there has been no great burst of enthusiasm, no pyrotechnics with the dull, sickening sense of endeavoring to support a hopeless future; rather has it been the fulfillment of courage born of a steadfastness of purpose to accomplish something that would prove without peradventure to be of benefit to all.

In a spirit of retrospection you may make a comparison between the positively negligible number of those who made use of the Library twelve years ago and the not to be disputed fact that upon the completion of this twelfth anniversary seven thousand one hundred and sixty-four cards have been issued to its patrons; a record of growth that is commensurate with its benefits as an educational factor.

It is worthy of note to state that of that number of cards five hundred and sixteen were issued during the past year. A slight decrease from the preceding year, but attributable to off-setting this slight decrease you are met by the anomalous situation of having the circulation of your Library increase to thirty-one thousand nine hundred and eighty-seven books, which were used by readers. Evidently there is no lack of interest among those who utilize the opportunities which the Library affords.

The most certain method of appraising the value of any library, as an educational factor, is to consider first the number of books as exhibited by its catalogue and secondly the type of books which it presents for circulation. That the catalogue of your Library has increased numerically to the extent that eleven thousand seven hundred and twenty-five books are listed; of which one thousand two hundred were purchased during the year, together with one hundred and twenty-five which were donated, including literature that may be classed as educational from a scientific standpoint; classical recreational and juvenile, this latter being both educational and recreational, places your Library in a plane equal, if not superior to the average Library that exists today, and reflects great credit upon the constant endeavor of the members of your book committee to not only build wisely by additions numerically to the books upon the shelves, but to maintain at the same time a standard of literature that is above criticism.

It is recorded that six thousand two hundred and sixty-five persons utilized the reading room of the Library during the year. Evidencing the fact that the rooms afford an attraction of which the readers are glad to take advantage.

Fines attached to the return of books to the Library have again proven a lucrative source of income, as three hundred and eleven dollars and ninety-one cents was contributed by those who through neglect or unavoidable delays were prevented from presenting their books upon the expiration of the stipulated time limit.

You are confronted by a most unique situation in that the Library is supported solely by those of our people who are public spirited enough to contribute annually toward its maintenance. A condition that is unusual inasmuch as it is customary to find that available funds usually are the result of an endowment or are derived through municipal taxation. The number of contributors to your Library is pitifully small as compared with the vast number of cards which have been issued to its patrons. Possibly less than one per cent. of those who patronize the Library contribute, other than fines, to its support. Every effort has been made to impress all with the fact that this is a free library; that it is open to every one who desires to take advantage of the opportunities which it affords, the restrictions being practically negligible and that each should be willing to help in even a small way to continue and increase its field of usefulness, by contributing toward its maintenance. For upon the funds which are available for the purchase of books depends the entire future of your Library. You may feel certain that with a better understanding of the conditions which exist, and under which each contributor of five dollars is considered a share holder, there will be a more loyal support to an institution which has in such great measure proven its worth to the town in which we live.

Books of reference, standard literature and works of a higher type than those classed as light reading are being utilized constantly by the school children and it has been a great measure of satisfaction to feel that your Library has been able to supply the demands arising from a source which will produce results that will repay any outlay that has been made.

It is with profound sorrow that we record the death, on August 14th, of our late fellow member, William E. Dadds, who since the inception of the Library as a free institution had taken an active part in its management. His wise counsel and mature judgment accompanied by an unflinching courtesy to his associates and to those with whom he came in contact had endeared him to all, and his passing is felt as a severe loss to the interests not only of this Library but also to the entire community.

The one hundred and twenty-five books which were donated were a most welcome addition to the Library shelves, and your Board of Managers desire to express their appreciation to the donors for literature which in this manner was made available to the readers.

The members of the Board also desire to express publicly their thanks to those who by their contributions made the operation of the Library possible.

The Library is most fortunate in being permitted to occupy the very delightful rooms in which it is installed. The building is so situated as to be easily accessible to its patrons, and the rooms which are utilized are bright, cheerful and conducive to the best interests of an institution such as you possess. It is with considerable pleasure that your Board of Managers avail themselves of this opportunity to express their great appreciation to Mr. Joseph R. Grundy for his public spirited action in placing the rooms at the disposal of the Library entirely freed from any charge.

Your retiring Board of Managers desire to thank Miss Rodgers, and her able assistants for the courteous treatment afforded patrons of the Library and for their constant effort in working for its success.

All of which is respectfully submitted.

President, Board of Managers

ASKING PRICE $300,000

All bids for the construction of approaches on the Trenton side to the Free Delaware River Bridge were rejected by the Joint Commission for the Elimination of Toll Bridges at a meeting yesterday in Philadelphia. Misunderstanding of the specifications by the bidders was the cause of rejection.

A committee consisting of Fred R. Parker, a member of the New Jersey Commission, State Senator Buckman, of the Pennsylvania Commission, and Louis Pocht, engineer to the joint commission, was appointed to confer with the contractors on the submission of new bids.

Discussion of the advisability of constructing a new bridge over the Delaware River above the present Calhoun Street structure was held by the commission on the initiative of Senator Buckman. No action was taken, however, as the commission received indirectly a report that the Trenton Bridge Company, owners of the Calhoun Street bridge, will lower their asking price of $300,000 for the span. The commission believes this sum exorbitant and has refused to consider it.

SIR WALTER AND POTATOES

Why does not one of the iconoclastic book makers and smart alecks start in on old Sir Walter Raleigh? It is rumored that there is nothing but rumor to support the famous legend of his gesture in covering a mud puddle with his only cloak; his interest in Virginia was purely that of an absentee landlord; his stories of his adventures in Guiana are largely yarns, and he has no right to his fame as the hero who introduced Ireland to potatoes.

The story that Raleigh had potatoes brought from Virginia and planted in his own garden in Ireland does not easily down, but there is said to be no basis for it. The potato did not grow in Virginia until more than a century after Raleigh's death, although contemporary stories confused it with the open-awk, or "ground nut," which still grows unnoticed in this country, and once formed a staple part of both Indian's and colonist's diet.

The Irish potato came to Europe from the west coast of South America, and it reached Virginia and New England from Ireland. The Spaniards introduced it to Europe; Italians and even Viennese knew it before it was ever planted in Irish soil; but by 1663, a year of dearth in the British Isles, it was already an important food source in Ireland.

The Electors of Prussia forced their subjects to grow potatoes against their will; Frederick the Great sent dragoons out to encourage the peasants in potato culture; but it was the famine of the Seven Years' War which finally made potatoes popular in Germany, and it was a French prisoner in Germany during that war, Antoine Auguste Parmentier, who taught France to like the strange vegetable and gave to potato soup the name which appears on French menu cards today. So far as is known the first white potatoes to reach North America came to Londonderry, N. H., with Scotch-Irish immigrants in 1719, and they gradually made their way southward to Virginia.

Yes, it is high time the biographers get busy on poor old Sir Walter Raleigh.

THE "THIRD DEGREE"

When roughneck criminals with notorious records accuse police of brutality the public does not become particularly wrought up. The character of the witness and the probability that he would be no less brutal to the police if opportunity came his way are taken into consideration, the trouble he has caused society is recalled and there is no keen desire to have his charges sifted. The case is usually passed up without careful weighing of customary denials on the theory that the law-breaker had it coming to him.

But brought face to face with the issue whether even this class should be given in secret what treatment the police think is necessary to obtain confessions or other desired information, few persons would assert that the procedure is admissible. The rack and the thumbscrew were discarded—though they were formidable incentives to confession of guilt—because they were too brutal and cruel, proof that there is a limit to what is permissible to force out the truth.

But what can be more shocking than to learn that a wholly innocent person, clapped into jail on suspicion, is subjected to the third degree? What recompense can society make for so gross an abuse of an individual's rights and privileges?

WET LOGIC APPLIED

Up until last week there were 37 murders in Cuyahoga County, Ohio (City of Cleveland), since the beginning of the year. Of these 37 murders 17 remain unsolved. As the law against murder is so generally violated, why not move for its repeal or modification? What is the use of clattering up the statute books with laws that can not be enforced? Repeal the laws against murder and theft and the people will not kill and steal. This is in line with wet arguments against the prohibition law. How foolish such an argument!—(Adv.)
